OLD TOWN WALKS

"A nation's culture resides in the hearts and in the soul of its people."

— SUN YAT-SEN, 1924

FOR THOSE LOOKING FOR SWEEPSTUN CHARM: SHAMIAN ISLAND. Just one of the many interesting facts about Shamian Island is that it never used to be an island at all. Measuring around 900 by 300 metres, the area was ceded to British and French forces in the 1850s, who promptly built a canal to separate it from the mainland. Home to some 200 Western-style buildings, its quiet, tree-lined boulevards make it a wonderful place for a stroll.

TIP: Take a coffee break in the around-level Starbucks branch, housed in a restored mansion, with its wide verandahs, outdoor terrace and friendly baristas serving up a typically wide range of coffees and teas.

Shamian Island, Liwan District

FOR THOSE WANTING TO LEARN ABOUT HISTORY: ZHENHAI TOWER (ZHENHAILOU MUSEUM). This five-storey pagoda is one of the major landmarks of Guangzhou and when it was built — on a hilltop in the city's north in 1380 AD — it offered commanding views of the Pearl River. Today it serves as the fascinating Guangzhou Museum, with each floor taking you up from the area's first settlement 5,000 years ago, to the city's founding 2,000 years ago to the present.

TIP: Combine a visit here with a walk around leafy Yuexiu Park, in which the tower is found. Nearby is the famous five-ram statue, as well as a boating lake and numerous walking trails.

Zhenhai Road, Yuexiu District

FOR THOSE WHO KNOW THEIR HISTORY: SUN YAT-SEN MEMORIAL HALL. Revered as the founder of modern China, Sun Yat-sen was the country's first president after the end of the Qing Dynasty. After his passing in 1925 at age 59, construction began on this memorial, which was completed in 1931. At the northern side is a statue of Sun, facing onto an octagon-shaped building that houses an exhibition on his life, and a hall that can hold 5,000 people.

TIP: Behind the hall you'll find a staircase leading into Yuexiu Park — follow this all the way to the top and you'll reach a memorial pillar for Sun with fantastic views of the city to the south.
